REFERENCE	YEAR	DEFINITION OR CRITERIA	ADVANTAGES	DISADVANTAGES
Petty and Ashbaugh ¹	1971	Severe dyspnea, tachypnea Cyanosis refractory to oxygen therapy Increased pulmonary compliance Diffuse alveolar infiltrates on chest radiography Atelectasis, vascular congestion, hemorrhage, pulmonary edema, and hyaline membranes at autopsy	First description Summarizes clinical features well	Lacks specific criteria to identify patients systematically
Murray et al. ²	1988	Preexisting direct or indirect lung injury Mild to moderate or severe lung injury Nonpulmonary organ dysfunction	Includes 4-point lung-injury scoring system Specifies clinical cause of lung injury Includes consideration of the presence or absence of systemic disease	Lung-injury score not predictive of outcome Lacks specific criteria to exclude a diagnosis of cardiogenic pulmonary edema
Bernard et al. ³	1994	Acute onset Bilateral infiltrates on chest radiography Pulmonary-artery wedge pressure ≤ 18 mm Hg or the absence of clinical evidence of left atrial hypertension Acute lung injury considered to be present if PaO_2/FiO_2 is ≤ 300 Acute respiratory distress syndrome considered to be present if PaO_2/FiO_2 is ≤ 200	Simple, easy to use, especially in clinical trials Recognizes the spectrum of the clinical disorder	Does not specify cause Does not consider the presence or absence of multi-organ dysfunction Radiographic findings not specific

* PaO_2 denotes partial pressure of arterial oxygen, and FiO_2 fraction of inspired oxygen.

Score	Hypoxemia, PaO_2/FiO_2	Consolidation on Chest Radiograph	PEEP (when Ventilated)	Compliance (when Awake/Spontaneous, mL/cm H ₂ O)
0	≥ 300	No alveolar	≥ 5 cm H ₂ O	≥ 60
1	225-300	1 Quadrant	≥ 5 cm H ₂ O	40-59
2	150-225	2 Quadrants	8-11 cm H ₂ O	40-59
3	100-150	3 Quadrants	12-15 cm H ₂ O	40-59
4	< 100	4 Quadrants	≥ 15 cm H ₂ O	< 20
